WORD TURN ENGINE v37 – THE TIME VAULT

Theme: Time travel, temporal anchors, past and future selves, journals as time machines.

Self-care philosophy: Every journal entry is a time capsule. Reading old entries is time travel. Planning is navigation through the future. The LOT journal is your personal time vault – a record of who you were, a message to who you'll become. Time is not the enemy; it is the archive medium. When you name your past self with compassion, you grant them retroactive dignity. When you write to your future self, you are already becoming them.

Design inspiration: H.G. Wells built the first modern time machine in 1895. Doctor Who made the TARDIS bigger on the inside. Back to the Future gave us the DeLorean. All three share one truth: the machine is not the point – the relationship across time is. LOT's journal is that machine.

Design Rationale

The Time Vault vocabulary maps to the full temporal arc of self-care journaling:

- time_capsule / past_self – meeting what you recorded before; the archive's first gift
- future_self / temporal_anchor – fixing this moment in time; writing the message forward
- rewind_moment / fast_forward – the natural motion of reflection: backward and forward
- era_closed / epoch_marker – naming the geological layers of a life; before/after moments
- duration_logged / parallel_timeline – honest measurement of time spent; the road not taken
- loop_broken / time_vault_key – the vault's deepest prize: interrupting what repeats; opening what was sealed
- Secret Bosses – wellsian_engine (H.G. Wells, the original time machine), tardis_detected (bigger on the inside – like every good journal), delorean_protocol (the DeLorean as save-state machine; the flux capacitor as the courage it takes)

CALENDAR EASTER EGGS v35 – THE TIME CALENDAR (+3)

Symbol	ID	Date	Rarity	Occasion
----- ----- ----- ----- -----
`■.■.■`	hawking_birthday	Jan 8	RARE	Stephen Hawking's Birthday (1942)
`■.■.■`	pale_blue_dot	Feb 14	EPIC	Pale Blue Dot Photo Anniversary (1990)
`◆.■.◆`	wells_birthday	Sep 21	RARE	H.G. Wells Birthday (1866)

Lore:

- hawking_birthday (Jan 8): Stephen Hawking made time curved, beautiful, and survivable. His "A Brief History of Time" was the first popular book that made the universe feel like home.
 - pale_blue_dot (Feb 14): On Valentine's Day 1990, Voyager 1 turned its camera backward. Carl Sagan asked it to. The image is a message across time: everyone who ever lived is a pale blue dot.
 - wells_birthday (Sep 21): Herbert George Wells was born September 21, 1866. He built the first time machine in literature. He did not know he was also building the template for every journal: a device for moving through time.
