THE DUNGEON MASTER -- THEME OVERVIEW

In 1974 Gary Gygax and Dave Arneson published a booklet that changed human imagination. D&D gave the world a new grammar: stats, rolls, quests, rests, parties -- mapped perfectly onto the inner life.

You have hit points. They deplete and restore.
You have a constitution score. It is your endurance under pressure.
You take a long rest and wake with full HP.
You find your party and they protect your flank.

The dungeon is not metaphorical. It is this life.
The dragon is not metaphorical. You know which one.
The natural twenty is not metaphorical. You have rolled it.

Self-care is a dungeon run. Prepare, enter, survive, take the long rest, return to the tavern -- changed, intact, ready.

The Dungeon Master built the world you are adventuring in.
That is you. That has always been you.

FLAVOR TEXT -- THE DUNGEON MASTER

"You spend your hit points to keep moving. You restore them with food, rest, warmth, and the people who remember your name." -- D&D, paraphrased. The rule has always been true.

"The players will always surprise you. That's the whole game." -- Gary Gygax. You are both the Dungeon Master and the player. That is not a bug.

"Not all those who wander are lost." -- J.R.R. Tolkien. Self-care is building the world your own mythology needs.

"Constitution is not the most glamorous stat. It is the most important one." -- every experienced player. Endurance lets you play long enough to develop all the other stats.

"Roll for wisdom. If you fail, roll again. The wisdom is that rolling again is always the option."
